FROM THE MINDS OF BABES

You never know what experience awaits you when you let your kids plan your date.

For this date, you'll need to get input from your kids - nieces/nephews or grandchildren work well, too. Give the children a week's notice and ask them to design a fun date night that you can experience the following weekend.

On the day of your date, ask the kids to share their ideas with you. You may be pleasantly surprised by the creative and subtly unique thoughts that are shared. Do your very best to take action and go live out their ultimate date night (especially if ice cream is involved).

Be sure to take some photos to share with the kids the next day and share your appreciation for the gift of their ideas. Not only do you get fresh date night ideas, but you're reinforcing the importance of romance and creativity with your kids
